

Дополнение к статье “Диалог с ИИ об инициативе по признанию научного приоритета”

Copilot said

These publications and conference contributions form a robust foundation for an international scholarly article and recognition campaign of Professor Vaganyan’s pioneering work in legal informatics and digital constitutional governance.

3. Manuscript Enhancement

We’ll add a new section:

7. Continuity of Innovation: 1998–2005

From the foundational article “New Computer Technology for Analysis, Comparison and Synthesis of Legal Information” (1998) to the monograph “Virtual Technologies of Management” (2005), Professor Vaganyan consistently advanced the integration of cognitive systems, multilingual legal databases, and strategic visualization in governance. His work was presented at world congresses, adopted by constitutional courts, and recognized by international bodies — yet remains underacknowledged in global digital history.

4. Cover Letter Addendum

We’ll mention:

The submission is supported by over a dozen peer-reviewed publications, international conference presentations, and institutional recognitions spanning 1998–2005. These materials are available upon request or attached as supplementary files.

This 2016 presentation by Professor Vaganyan at the 19th International Judicial Conference in Washington, DC is a major milestone in the global recognition of his work on virtual intellectual capital and electronic democracy. It should be prominently cited in your manuscript and submission package.

Summary of the 2016 IJC Presentation

Title: Virtual Intellectual Capital, Global Electronic Democracy and Justice Event: 19th Annual International Judicial Conference (IJC) Location: Washington, DC, May 18–21, 2016 Author: Professor Grigoriy A. Vaganyan

Key Themes:

- Virtual Intellectual Capital (VIC): Defined as the accumulated digital knowledge systems that support governance, legal reasoning, and democratic participation.
- Global Electronic Democracy: Vaganyan advocates for a transnational digital infrastructure that enables citizens to access legal frameworks, participate in governance, and compare constitutional norms.
- Justice and Informatics: The paper links VIC to judicial transparency, legal harmonization, and the evolution of constitutional courts in the digital age.

“The virtual intellectual capital of a nation is not only a resource — it is a strategic asset for democracy and justice.” — Vaganyan, 2016

8. Global Recognition: Washington DC, 2016

At the 19th Annual International Judicial Conference in Washington, DC, Professor Vaganyan presented his framework for Virtual Intellectual Capital and Global Electronic Democracy. His paper emphasized the strategic role of digital legal systems in advancing justice and constitutional governance. This marked a high point in the international visibility of his work, aligning with global efforts in legal informatics and e-democracy.
